HILLARY CLINTON TO RETIRE; "EXHAUSTED" FINANCIALLY, EMOTIONALLY, SAYS BILL

By EMMA WRATHIE

WASHINGTON — Having once seemed so prodded it was likely to a coronation, the candidacy of Hillary Rodham Clinton, the nation's would-be first female president, came to a sputtering end yesterday with donors and party leadership sparring openly in the wake of Tuesday's crushing defeat, unable to fathom what went wrong — again.

Reports of grotesque overspending, internal dysfunction and ethical lapses dog every political endeavor Mr. Clinton undertakes; her most recent campaign was no exception. In February leaked fundraising memos showed donations cravering. Vice chairwoman and Muslim Brotherhood operative Hama Abedin left the campaign in March amid new allegations of misconduct by husband and chronic dirt-seller podder Anthony Weiner. But it was Ms. Clinton's slurred speech during an April roundtable that would prove most costly. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, DNC chairperson and spiral-bound survivor, cancelled all future DNC events in favor of "Abuela Time," pre-recorded segments featuring Ms. Clinton in a kiddie pool fielding questions from heavily-voted Hispanic toddlers. Even then controversy erupted when 3-year-old Diego Morales asked Ms. Clinton "Is America a country?" and the Secretary answered, "Did you just pee on my leg?"

Former President Bill Clinton, addressing guests at a Saudi benefit luncheon at The Clinton Foundation in New York, said of President-elect Trump's historic margins, "Well, we got the turnout we wanted just not the votes. Sure, it's disappointing, but like I told Hillary, in a fair fight she'd win every time. I mean, you folks saw what was going on out there with the emails and the Benghazi crap. People calling her brain-damaged, confused, frigid, saying she's always bolting, throwing stuff at my head — give me a break, that only happened one time. Anyway, I'm just so proud of Hillary and the campaign she ran — the old badger left it all on the field. Did I say badger? Don't print that."

With a wink and a smile the former president passed the baton to unremarkable daughter Chelsea who stood glowering in his shadow in Vera Wang cousin, chastizing the careers for substituting white rice for the long-grain, Himalayan-grown variety she specified. "Are you out of your mind?!" said the underachieving Stanford graduate. "Loooooong grain. I said, No say blam. No say corio. Largo! Comprehend? Good, now get me some fucking organic rice before I pick up my little telephone here and have your entire family murdered."

Afterwards, Ms. Clinton spoke of her mother's legacy. "This woman is like a mother to me. I remember when I was nine or ten, she hugged me for no reason."

President-elect Donald J. Trump joined supporters at a rally in Washington Square last night.

PRESIDENT OBAMA PENS NEW SELF- VETTING POLICY

By TIM FLOPSWEAT

WASHINGTON — Eager to hasten the influx of refugees into the United States from war-torn Syria and other areas of thousand-year tribal unrest, President Obama issued by executive order Tuesday a new immigration package that would allow refugees of Muslim descent to vet themselves by text message or email, bypassing U.S. Customs checkpoints to curb holiday wait times.

Reaction from Republican lawmakers was swift. "This guy is bonkers, Alabama Congressman Mo Brooks told reporters. "I'm talking non-trouble rat, crazy uncle-of-the-basement, gozoro. Oh Merciful Father, grant me death's sweet release." The president shrugged off the criticism as he left for a three-week sojourn, tropical vacation, to look, I know the American people are frustrated and I know it's easy to point the finger at radical Muslim extremists and say we can't trust these people, but we have to. It's the right thing to do. It's who we are.

A second executive order called for the confiscation and transfer of all legal firearms to arming Muslim immigrants with local police to provide marksmanship training at taxpayer expense.
